Lubrication may damage the internal motor mechanism. Also take special precautions to avoid the use of cleaners that contain lubrication. End of life is normally determined by wear and damage due to use. Body fluids and tissue should not be allowed to dry on instruments prior to cleaning MAXIMUM 30 minutes. Disposable surgical accessories should be discarded after use, handling them as any contaminated sharp accessory is handled. Reuse of surgical cutting accessories is not recommended. If pneumatic hose is used in lieu of a washer cap, the hose must be drained of all residual fluids prior to sterilization. This can be accomplished by holding the hose end over end to allow all liquid to drain. Determination of cleaning agents shall be by local or country regulations. DO NOT overload the trays. Scrub the handpiece with the brush, paying close attention to instrument crevices. Flushing removes blood, debris and saline deposits. This can be accomplished by holding the hose end over end to allow all liquid to drain. See sterilization section below. An air gun can also be used to dry the handpiece.
