A misplaced shot may cost you a tournament or merely injure your prey, requiring you to hunt down a wounded animal. Make every shot count by adjusting your Bushnell scope before you head out into the field or to any target competition. Items you will need Rifle Ammunition Target range with target Step 1 Set up your target at a safe and approved firing range. Set the target at a distance of more than 100 yards because Bushnell rifle scopes are preset on the parallax — when the target image does not focus on the reticle plane — to 100 yards. Load your rifle and get into your shooting position.<http://acrofine.com/www/admin/upfile/dell-inspiron-b130-manual-pdf.xml>

Step 2 Look through the scope and find the target image in the scope. Use the focus eyepiece adjustment to bring the image into focus. Take a shot. Retrieve the target and see where the shot hit compared to where you were aiming. Set the target back in the same location. Step 3 Turn the windage adjustment — the dial to the side of the scope — a quarter turn to either the left or right, determined by where your original shot hit. If it hit to the left, turn the windage dial a quarter turn to the left, and if it hit to the right, turn it a quarter turn to the right. Take a shot and check the target to see where it hit. This adjustment is used for the horizontal plane. Continue to site it in until you achieve the horizontal adjustment you desire. Step 4 Set up a new target at the same distance and take a shot. Retrieve the target and see if the shot went high or low to where you were aiming. Turn the elevation adjustment dial — found on the top middle section of the Bushnell scope, a quarter turn to the right to elevate the scope, or to the left a quarter turn to lower the elevation. Take another shot after your adjustment and check the target. Step 5 Continue to make quarterturn adjustments until you get the desired result with your scope and shot. I am consistently hitting inches to the right of center and I have adjusted the scope as far left as I can, any suggestions. GL and any questions just post and ill help not please rate this as fixya Note i can provide EXACT information that would allow you to determine range, and windage and elevation adjustments by looking through scope and estimating range then factoring in weather variables. NOTE you hafta enjoy math or just want to know how to shoot really well. Login to post This nesesitates mounting a scope off to the side to avoid jamming the action with a spent case hitting the scope and failing to clear the action. I bought it new last year, but only took it to the range last week. At 25 yards, it shoots 9. Tighten it back down but not completely. Loosen the rear looking for some movement or popping sound. If you see a movement or notice some odd thing. If all is well. Go and start and zero for 13 15 yards. Now after each shot rap the scope with a screw driver handle or something solid, just to give the scope a shock not hard enough to bend it or dent it but shock it. Large scopes are meant for larger shock than a 22 produces, rapping the scope will help move the cross hairs and settle them in place. Hope this Fixya up. If it does help, please leave a testimonial. Thank you for using Fixya. The rifle is clean and operates great. It seems to wander all over the target. If you want to change the range on the scope, it will be guesswork. I use a Bushnell Banner 39X40 with BDC. If you have BDC, make sure you have the correct distance ring in for the caliber. It will make all the difference in the world. If you install them on the front scope ring, it will correct it and realign the rings correctly. It appears that the front ring towards the muzzle is not as high as the rear ring near the breach.

This is why that even though the scopes adjustment is elevated as high as it will go, it is still hitting low because it is actually pointing down because apparently the rear ring is higher off the barrel than the front ring. The Bushnell inserts can correct this. Which, of course, takes me back to the Bushnell web page. Its a circular race track. Just send me the damn caps. Then I asked for a user manual for said scope. No dice. The customer support lady told me to find the manual on the Simmons web page. The Simmons web page doesnt provide user manuals online. Their customer support needs a lot of improvement. Can Buffalo Bore ammo be safely fired Answer questions, earn points and help others. I pulled it out and the power dial was hard as crap to turn. I thought at first maybe if i do a few twist with it that eventually it would loosen up. It didnt after 50 back and forth 3 to 9 and 93 turns, its still just as hard to turn. You wont regret it! Thomas Paine You wont regret it! Easy to turn now and no adverse effects. Putting it on an old Marlin 39AS this weekend. It has been used on a 300 win mag, 270, 7mm Mag and many other rifles as I recall and hold zero great and glass is clear as it can be. Ive got one on a 22 that really is amazing for what it is, tracks true, holds zero, for what its on its a pretty decent fit. Now that its working you might try some dry graphite once the WD40 evaporates. Not sure how it will work but I was told that one time. It did a real good job before it broke. Alas, many orders were canceled when a shipping strike held up delivery. It proved to be the boost he needed. By 1960, more than 18,000 dealers worldwide carried Bushnell products. Three years later he introduced a Scopemaster riflescope line 2.5X, 4X and 6X models with internal adjustments and coated optics. Renamed ScopeChief, the series improved to emerge as ScopeChief II in 1965. A forward prism enabled the reticle to remain fixed in the second focal plane. A "Command Post" gave you the choice of crosswire or post. There are some scuffs and scratches. Please see all the pictures. They are a large part of the description. Please ask any questions prior to bidding. I will combine shipping if I can do so safely. Fragile items will mostly be shipped Priority. As the post office seems to think parcel post boxes are footballs. Local pickups are always welcome, as are international bidders. I do not know what they have been exposed to or where they have been. They may have been around pets, perfumes, chemicals, or smoke. I also often use recycled packing materials. If you are highly sensitive to any of these things, I'd rather you not bid and end up unhappy.. more Thank you for viewing my auction and have a great day. I upgraded and I am looking for a good home for this scope. It has marks where the rings were mounted. No dents, and never abused. The scope is in great shape, clear optics, used for paper punching, and is waterproof. Come with bikini caps, not shown, no rings. The photo is of the actual scope that is up for bid. I accept Paypal and check. Thanks for looking. Has minor scratches and dings associated with a used scope. ABOUT MY LISTINGS Please note that I buy and sell items as a hobby in my spare time.
